Hullo

I'm not an expert on this topic by any means.

However, I have spent the last three years as a Grey Nomad' covering a lot of this amazing country, Australia. But, what I have observed shames me as an Australian who was born 76 years ago in Sydney.

During my lifetime I've seen greed and avarice destroy the only valuable resource we have: our environment and all its flora and fauna. Without a healthy biodiversity, we also will die. Does any member of the NSW Government have an understanding of what that means?

What is Australia's position on the recent international agreement to restore and protect a minimum of 30% of each nation by 2030? How can the Government justify ignoring this agreement?

There's a simple way to measure the destruction and, that is, to have a look at how little road kill there is throughout the whole country. There is no road kill because in the past 250 years we've made a reckless and concerted effort to get the environment to bend to suit us.

Does our government listen to the warnings and predictions, such as the fact that koalas will be extinct in roughly 30 years? Shame on each and everyone of you in government.

Yours sincerely
